Facts About White Burley Tobacco.

Western Tobacco Journal.

CHICAGO, November 15, 1885.

Editor Tobacco Leaf:

Please state, for the information of several readers of the Tobacco Leaf, why the Tobacco used for the manufacture of certain plug is called "White Burley?" Is it because it is produced on the same soil that grows the Burley white oak, and this is sweeter, or how does it differ from other Tobacco?

The New York Leaf requests some one to answer the above. This we can do to a degree. We have been unable to definitely ascertain the origin of the word "Burley" as applied to Tobacco, but we are led to believe that it is a corruption of the name "Burleigh," as we have heard Tobacco spoken of as "Burleigh Tobacco." Possibly its meaning may have a remote connection with the famous Lord Cecil (long a favorite minister of the "Virgin Queen," who bestowed upon him the title of Lord Burleigh), or some of his American descendants. White Burley, or White Tobacco, as it was originally named, first made its appearance near Higginsport, Brown County, Ohio. Mr. Webb, a farmer, in the spring of 1864 secured from Mr. G. Barkley, of Bracken county, Kentucky, a quantity of the seed of the variety known as Little Burley. He sowed some of the seed, and, when transplanting the young plants, he observed several of them were white or light yellow in color. He discarded them, deeming them unhealthy plants. The next year he sowed more of the seed bought the year previous, and, to his astonishment, many of the plants possessed the same peculiarities as those discarded the previous year. Instead of throwing these away, he and some of his neighbors planted them in their fields, and from this small beginning and accidental discovery soon developed the extensive culture of one of the very best paying and most useful varieties of Tobacco known. From the beginning most remunerative prices were obtained, as manufacturers of plug and fine cut chewing at once became convinced of its special adaptability to their needs. The first lot of this variety of Tobacco sold brought $58 00 per hundred, and in late years as high as $65 00 per hundred was obtained for a choice lot. Its culture is practically confined to the southern part of Ohio, the northern and central part of Kentucky, and a few counties in Missouri, Limestone land—that is, land with an undercropping of limestone—is essential to its profitable and economical culture.

The Wayland liquor law passed by the last Connecticut legislature, provides for the sealing of all saloon doors on Sunday by an official.

The lecture rooms of the Vienna Medical College are so crowded that lately a sensible American stepped up to the lecturer and said: "Sir, I do not see, I do not hear, I do not learn. Permit to return you my card of admission, and be good enough to return me my money." It was done.

In some parts of Spain where butter is a rare article of merchandise it is sold not by the pound, but by the yard. It is brought from the mountain districts in sheep's intestines, like sausages that are "tied off" with a string in lengths as required by the buyer. To travelers by the inch seems rather curious bargaining; the product is usually not palatable nor particularly clean.

Sam Kennedy was sent to the Massachusetts state prison for life on a conviction of incendiarism. He served 15 years with such good behavior that the Governor released him, but made a full pardon upon his leading a law abiding life. But he did not keep his pledge, and, on being caught in a burglary, has been returned to prison, with no prospect of ever again being released.

John Grismer has always been poor, and when he put $20 into the plate at church at Connellville, Mo., there was thought to be some mistake, but he said that he really desired to make the contribution. The note was soon identified, by means of its number having been recorded as part of $2,000 recently stolen, and then Grismer confessed. What he had intended as a relief for his conscience led to his detection.

In a wedding ceremony, as enacted in a play now now running in a Chicago theatre, acolytes march at the head of the procession, and for this purpose the choir boys of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension, the most ritualistic in that city, were engaged. The pastor forbade them to appear in the customary scarlet and lace robes, but they disobeyed and have therefore been dismissed from the choir.

Che Mab, the Chinese dwarf, whose smallness is equaled only by his ugliness, is engaged to marry a good looking white girl connected with the traveling show of which he forms a part. She is a Roman Catholic, and desires to have the ceremony performed by a priest of that church, but she has thus far been unable to find one who will officiate. The latest application was to a Chicago pastor, but he, like all the rest, advised her against the match.

In 1816 one bushel of corn would buy one pound of nails. In 1882 one bushel of corn would buy fifteen pounds of nails. In 1816 it took from twenty to eighty dozen of eggs to buy a bushel of salt. In 1882 one dozen of eggs would do the same thing. In 1816 is required 64 bushels of barley to buy one yard of broadcloth. In 1882 five bushels of barley would do the business. In 1816 it required one bushel of wheat to purchase one yard of calico. In 1882 one bushel of wheat would purchase thirty-five yards of a better article. In 1816 a pair of woolen blankets cost as much as a cow. In 1882 a cow would buy from six to twenty pair of blankets superior in every respect.

Novel Way to Raise Missionary Money.

Westchester (Pa.) Jeffersonian.

A very interesting occurrence has just taken place at Princetown, Berks county. Last year a superintendent of a large Sunday school induced all the children to plant as large a tract of land as they could take care of on their fathers' farm with corn, the product to be sold and the proceeds sent to American missionaries in Japan. The children did as requested, and turned in about ninety bushels of shelled corn as the result of their labors. The little ones brought their corn to the school in bags or baskets and a pleasant time followed. The corn will probably be sold to the highest bidder and the money sent away as per agreement. This action will be imitated extensively next year in the same section.
